

HISTORY AND CONSTITUTION OF THE WORLD ASSOCIATION OF VETERINARY ANATOMISTS (WAVA)

HISTORY

WAVA began as a "suggestion" made by Prof. Clement Bressou (Alfort) in 1955 at the International Anatomical Congress held in Paris. The proposal to form an International Association of Veterinary Anatomists came in response to the Paris revision of the (human) Nomina Anatomica (NA). The revision deliberately ignored the problems of comparative anatomy so that the NA were of little use to veterinary anatomists. In the same vein, the International Commission for Veterinary Education laid down international standards completely ignoring the views of veterinary anatomists and the needs for the teaching of veterinary anatomy.

The International Association of Veterinary Anatomists was founded in September 1957 in Freiburg (Germany) at the 54th Congress of the Anatomische Gesellschaft; twenty-two veterinary anatomists were present at the 1st General Assembly.

WAVA meets in conjunction with the Congresses of the International Federation of Associations of Anatomists (IFAA) which meets every five years (1980 Mexico, 1985 London, 1989 Rio de Janeiro, 1994 Lisbon, etc.) and with the World Veterinary Congress held by the World Veterinary Association (WVA) which meets every four years (1979 Moscow, 1983 Perth [Australia], 1987 Montreal, 1991 Rio de Janeiro, etc.). This is why our General Assemblies are held at irregular intervals. The election of officers takes place every four years at the meeting held with the World Veterinary Congress.

At the 5th General Assembly in Vienna (1961), the name was changed to World Association of Veterinary Anatomists, and the American and Japanese Associations of Veterinary Anatomists became the first two collective members of WAVA. (The formation of a European Association of Veterinary Anatomists was being contemplated.) Professors Bressou and Barone, the first President and Secretary-General, were charged with writing a Constitution and Bylaws which, after repeated discussions at the first four General Assemblies, were adopted and published in 1961.

CONSTITUTION AND BYLAWS

WAVA's Constitution and the Bylaws appended to it were adopted by the 5th General Assembly in Vienna (1961), four years after the Association was founded. The Constitution was amended at the 8th General Assembly in Paris (1967) with regard to nominations and election of the Executive Committee, and at the 10th General Assembly in Thessaloniki (1975) to make us comply with the requirements of the World Veterinary Association as an Association Member of Veterinary Specialists. At the 12th General Assembly in Mexico City (1980), a committee (Profs. Pierard, Montreal (Chairman); Barone, Lyon, and Aja-Guardiola, Mexico City) was appointed to revise the Constitution. The revised document was presented to the 13th General Assembly in Perth (1983). Further changes were made by the committee following the Perth meeting, and the resulting present Constitution was adopted by the 14th General Assembly in North Mymms (London) in 1985. It was translated into the three other official languages by Profs. Habel, Sack, and Aja-Guardiola.

- 3.2. The active members are recruited from the veterinarians of those countries represented in the World Veterinary Association or in the International Federation of Anatomy, who actively pursue the objectives of the Association. They enjoy all the rights and privileges of the Association, including the right to vote and to hold office. Applications for membership should be sent to the Secretary-General. Article 4: Procedures of the Association

The administration and the operation of the Association are the responsibility of the General Assembly and the Executive Committee.

- 4.1 The General Assembly is composed of all the members present or represented at the meetings of the Association. The collective members may be represented there by one or more delegates. The Association holds regular meetings in conjunction with World Veterinary Congresses or the Congresses of the International Federation of Anatomy. It may also hold special meetings in conjunction with other meetings or events. If less than one year intervenes between a Congress of the International Federation of Anatomy and the World Veterinary Congress, the Executive Committee has the authority to make any practical decision to fix the time and place of the Regular General Assembly. Within a period of nine months before and nine months after a World Veterinary Congress, the Association shall not hold any other scientific meeting except by special arrangement with the Bureau of the Permanent Committee of the World Veterinary Association.

A Regular General Assembly may make any decision it considers useful concerning the activities of the Association. It approves the accounts and the actions of the Executive Committee. It gives an opinion on the admission of collective members. It announces the election of the members of the Executive Committee. It takes note of admissions and resignations and makes the final decision on expulsions. A Special General Assembly deals only with the item or items of business for which it is convened.

During a General Assembly, the members present constitute a quorum; in a mail vote the number of those responding. Decisions of the General Assembly are taken by a majority vote. Every active or associate member is entitled to one vote. Each collective member has the right to one vote for every ten members or fraction of ten members for whom dues have been paid. Any member unable to attend a General Assembly may be represented by another member of the Association bearing a written proxy which must be presented at the time of the vote.

The membership may be polled at any time by mail vote on any question considered important by the Executive Committee. Eligibility to vote in such a poll is the same as in a General Assembly. The organization of a mail vote is the responsibility of the Secretary-General who must provide the members, along with the ballot, with the justification for a mail vote, and a complete and pertinent documentation of the matter in question. The mail vote must be sent in two envelopes (the outer one bearing the name of the voter for verification and the inner envelope without any mark of identification). The envelopes must be opened in the presence of the Regular or Special General Assembly.

- 4.2. The Executive Committee is composed of a President, four Vice Presidents of equal rank, a Secretary-General, and a Treasurer. With the exception of the Treasurer, the term of office of the Executive Committee covers the period between two Regular General Assemblies, if that period is not less than two years. The President and the Secretary-General are elected by vote of the membership.

One Vice President is elected by the members from the countries of Europe and Africa, including the countries of Western Asia (Turkey, Syria, Israel, Lebanon, Jordan, Iraq, Iran, Saudi Arabia, Persian Gulf countries, Peoples Democratic Republic of Yemen and the Arab Republic of Yemen). He represents on the Executive Committee the members of those countries and consults them directly when necessary.

One Vice President is elected by the members from the countries of North America, Central America, and South America. He represents on the Executive Committee the members of those countries and consults them directly when necessary.

One Vice President is elected by the members from the countries forming the Commonwealth of Independent States (CIS) that, with the exception of the three Baltic States, succeeded the former USSR.

One Vice President is elected by the members from the countries of Eastern Asia, including Afganistan and Pakistan. He represents on the Executive Committee the members of those countries and consults them directly when necessary.

The number of Vice Presidents will remain fixed at four. Therefore, according to the demo-geographic changes in the membership list, the boundaries of the geographic zones assigned to each Vice President may be modified by means of a Bylaw adopted by the General Assembly.

The Treasurer is elected by the membership. His term of office covers the periods between three Regular General Assemblies.

All of the officers may be elected to succeed themselves once, except that the President may not succeed himself.

The Executive Committee carries out the resolutions of the General Assembly and of the membership arrived at by mail vote, prepares the budget, and organizes its activities in accordance with the objectives of the Association. It makes the necessary decisions between General Assemblies. It reports its actions for the approval of the General Assembly. Its decision may be reached by correspondence or by any other method that it deems practicable.

Article 5: Representation

- 5.1. The President and the Secretary-General are the representatives of the Association. Such official representation can, in exceptional circumstances, with the agreement of the Executive Committee, be delegated temporarily to any member of the Association.

Article 6: Official Languages

Article 7: Funds of the Association

The funds of the Association are derived from dues of the members, subsidies from governments, public authorities, universities and various other organizations and private persons, as well as exceptional receipts resulting from the activities of the Association.

- 7.1. The amount of the dues is fixed by the General Assembly. The dues of the collective members are equal to the dues of one regular member for every ten members or fraction of ten members belonging to the collective.
- 7.2. The President orders the expenditures. The Treasurer keeps an account of receipts and expenditures and, if necessary, an inventory of property. The President appoints two members to audit the Treasurer's report before it is presented at the General Assembly.

Article 8: Amendment of the Constitution

- 8.1. Any amendment of the present Constitution must be approved by a two-thirds majority of those voting.
- 8.2. A mail vote is obligatory in this case. The proposed amendment or change must be submitted to the members at least three months before the date fixed for the General Assembly. The organization of the mail vote is the responsibility of the Secretary-General, who must also furnish pertinent and complete documentation to the members. The method of voting described in Article 4.1 must be followed in its entirety.
- 8.3. Any member may propose an amendment to the Constitution by submitting it to the Executive Committee who will decide when to put the proposed amendment to a vote.
